

CourtrightCollective

INTERNAL RUNBOOK

INTERNAL, COURTRIGHT COLLECTIVE

Running the 30 Day Challenge

The facilitation checklist. What to send, when to check in, and where people quit.

INTERNAL

COHORT RUNBOOK

NOT FOR CLIENTS

COURTRIGHTCO.COM

BUILT IN NASHVILLE

Running the 30 Day Challenge

Internal document. Do not send this to participants.

Participant [NAME] | Cohort [MONTH] | Start date [DATE] | Ship date [DATE + 30]

What the participant gets

- ☐ The 30-day outline as a PDF, on day 0
- ☐ The Indie App Starter Kit, full download
- ☐ The Launch Playbook
- ☐ The ASO Cheat Sheet
- ☐ Three group calls: kickoff, day 15, launch week
- ☐ A shared channel for questions, answered within one business day
- ☐ One 20-minute one-to-one, redeemable any time in the 30 days
- ☐ A ship-date accountability email at day 7, 14, 21, 28, and 30

Day 0, before the cohort starts

- ☐ Welcome email with the outline PDF and the Starter Kit download
- ☐ Ship date stated as a real calendar date, not "in 30 days"
- ☐ Calendar invites for all three group calls
- ☐ Channel invite
- ☐ Intake form: what they want to build, their experience level, how many hours a week they honestly have
- ☐ Read every intake form. Anybody whose idea is obviously too big gets a personal note before day 1, not on day 5

The kickoff call, 45 minutes

- 0 to 10: Everybody says their idea in one sentence. Enforce the one sentence, kindly but actually
- 10 to 25: The scoping questions, run live. Anybody scoring under 24 picks something smaller on the call
- 25 to 35: How the thirty days work. The rules. Where people quit and why
- 35 to 45: Questions

The single most valuable thing you do all month happens in this call: making people cut their idea down before they start. Everyone who fails this challenge fails because their day 1 idea was too big, not because their day 15 effort was too small.

Where people quit, and what to do about it

DAY	WHAT HAPPENS	YOUR MOVE
3	Reading bad reviews is boring. Some skip it	Post one great find from a competitor's reviews in the channel. Makes it feel worth doing
5	Cutting in half hurts	Post about something you cut from your own app that you never missed
10	The ugly core loop feels bad. This is the biggest drop-off point	Post an ugly screenshot of one of your own apps at day 10. Nothing helps more than this
14	Using your own app reveals problems. Motivation dips	Remind them: three fixes only, the rest goes in version two
19	Device testing finds real breakage	Offer the one-to-one slot here. Most people use it around now
22 to 24	Store listing and legal work is nobody's favorite	Templates. Just hand them templates
26	Submission anxiety	Remind everyone that most first submissions get rejected once and it is routine
29	Rejection lands	Same-day response in the channel. Rejection at day 29 is where somebody quits at the finish line

Accountability emails

Day 7: "Week one done. You should have a sentence, a cut list, sketches, and a name. Reply with your sentence." Day 14: "Halfway. Core loop working and data sticking? If not, tell me where you are stuck today, not on day 25." Day 21: "Nine days. Everything from here is store paperwork and polish. The hard part is behind you." Day 28: "Two days. If you are not submitted, submit tomorrow with whatever you have. Manual release." Day 30: "Ship it. Post the link in the channel. We will all download it."

Keep them short. Four lines maximum. Long check-in emails do not get read by somebody who is behind, which is exactly who they are for.

The day 15 call, 30 minutes

- Everybody shares their screen for 60 seconds. Enforce the timer
- The main job is normalizing how rough everything looks at day 15
- Unblock anybody genuinely stuck
- Publicly name anybody who has cut scope. Reward the behavior you want

Launch week call, 45 minutes

- Everybody demos
- Walk through the store submission and rejection process live
- Set the day 31 expectation clearly: launch day is quiet, and that is normal
- Ask each person what they are building next

After the cohort

- [] Download and use every app that shipped. Leave an honest review on each
- [] Ask for a testimonial from anybody who shipped, in the week after they ship, while they are still elated
- [] Post the ship count publicly. It is the only marketing this challenge needs
- [] Personal note to anybody who did not ship, with no pitch attached, offering their spot in the next cohort free

The metric that matters

Ship rate. Not signups, not satisfaction scores. What percentage of people who started had something live in a store on day 30.

Publish it honestly, including the misses. A challenge that says "9 of 12 shipped" is more credible and sells better than one implying everyone did.

Pricing and capacity notes

- $199 per person. Cohorts of 8 to 12
- Time cost per cohort: roughly 3 hours of calls, plus 30 to 45 minutes a day in the channel for a month. Call it 20 hours
- At 10 people that is $1,990 for about 20 hours, which works, and the real return is that a third of participants become build clients or partnership candidates
- Do not run these back to back. One cohort a quarter, maximum. The value is in the attention, and attention does not scale
- Run the first one at a reduced price for a small group to find where the outline breaks. It will break somewhere around day 10 and day 22