

FOR EBAY SELLERS

You're paying eBay for sales you'd have made anyway.

Promoted Listings takes its cut whether the ad actually mattered or not. RateTamer audits your fees per SKU and shows you which listings are earning their spend... and which ones are just donating margin.

Who told you to promote at 13%?
Because it wasn't your numbers.

"Suggested" ad rates are suggestions from the company that collects the fee. RateTamer works for the other side of that transaction... you. It reads your actual sales data and finds the rate each SKU deserves. Sometimes that's zero.

Some of your listings rank fine without ads. Promoting those means paying a fee on buyers who were going to find you regardless.

RateTamer flags exactly which SKUs those are.

THE MARGIN MATH

Your margin isn't shrinking. It's being collected.

100 sales/mo, avg	$40.00
-------------------	---------

Promoted at 10%	-$400/mo
-----------------	-----------

Sales that needed the ad	~60
--------------------------	-----

Fees on the other 40	$160/mo, gone
-----------------------------	-----------------------

That's nearly $2,000 a year spent promoting sales that didn't need promoting. RateTamer finds your version of this number. Takes minutes. Free.

QUICK QUESTION, SELLER TO SELLER

Promoted Listings cost you $_____

last month.

Couldn't fill in the blank? That's the problem. eBay knows the number to the penny. You should too. RateTamer pulls it apart per SKU and shows you which part was worth it.

Your ad rates are running feral.

Set once, forgotten, drifting up with every "suggested rate" nudge. It's in the name, folks. RateTamer brings them to heel... every SKU at the rate the data says, not the rate the platform hopes.
